

N F T TM

Not For Tourists TM Guide to PHILADELPHIA

On Our Radar

March 13, 2007

Lorenzo & Son's Pizza

The best things in life are not all free. For instance, a slice of pizza from Lorenzo & Son will set you back $2.25. For all the fine dining options in Philadelphia, you still can't beat a good slice of pizza. And for all the pizza options in Philly, it's hard to top a slice from Lorenzo's. Don't let their touristy South Street location fool you, this is the genuine article- saucy, thin-crust, and cut into slices large enough that it would be grand folly for any but the most gluttonous among us to ingest more than two at a time. Prime time is just as the bars are closing. You'll have to endure a hefty line full of starving drunks, but you'll get to witness poetry in motion as your chef puts pies together with a speed and grace that nearly defies description. Drink up, chow down, and thank your lucky stars you live so close to such fine pie.

www.notfortourists.com

Atlanta - Boston - Chicago - Los Angeles - New York City - Philadelphia - San Francisco - Seattle - Washington DC

© 2006

Tuesday, March 13, 2007

Lorenzo & Son's Pizza

Business/Location: Lorenzo & Son Pizza
Address: 305 South St
City: Philadelphia
State: PA
Zip Code: 19147
Phone: 215-627-4110
Website:

Posted by: Chris Picco

Photo: Chris Picco

Lorenzo & Son Pizza

The best things in life are not all free. For instance, a slice of pizza from Lorenzo & Son will set you back $2.25. For all the fine dining options in Philadelphia, you still can't get a good slice of pizza. And for all the pizza options in Philly, it's hard to top a slice from Lorenzo's. Don't let their touristy South Street location fool you, this is the genuine article- saucy, thin-crust, and cut into slices large enough that it would be grand for any but the most gluttonous among us to ingest more than two at a time. Prime time is just as the bars are closing. You'll have to endure a hefty line full of starving drunks, but you'll get to witness poetry in motion as your chef puts pies together with speed and grace that nearly defies description. Drink up, chow down, and thank your lucky stars you live so close to such fine pie.

Restaurants • Bella Vista / Queen Village

Link It • Print It • Email It • 0 comments • More Info & Map
